Committee Cites Direct Relationship Between Anti-Semitism And Policies Of Some Governments

American Jewish Committee warned that anti-Semitism, exploited as a "political weapon," was endangering Jews in various parts of the world. A special report on this situation was issued by the 57-year-old organization at the annual meeting of its national executive board in Boston, Mass., says the New York Times. The survey was based on reports by the Committee's offices abroad.

Harris Berlack, chairman of the Committee's foreign affairs committee, who submitted the report, asserted that there was a direct relationship "between the exploitation of anti-Semitism and the politics of totalitarian governments, as well as fanatical nationalism and highly unstable regimes."

He said the major areas where anti-Semitism was practiced are South America, particularly in Argentina, Algeria, France, and the Soviet Union.

Mr. Berlack held that Jews in the Soviet Union were being used as [illegible] for serious economic problems. He pointed out that members of the Union of Soviet Jewish communal leaders on charges of espionage, an obviously manipulation as part of a campaign to use Jews as distractions for a faltering economy.

Other Soviet measures against Jews cited by Mr. Berlack were: scores of synagogues closed by the state; Jewish Bibles barred from publication for the last forty years and no articles of Jewish ritual produced; legally constituted Jewish congregations isolated from each other, and no central religious bodies allowed; no contact allowed with Jewish groups in other countries; teaching of Hebrew not permitted.

In Argentina, the report said, neo-Fascist groups have been carrying on a widespread campaign of violence against democratic institutions and Jews "with apparent immunity," reports the New York Times. These groups, the Committee said, are strongly anti-American and appear to have the support of some Argentine army officers.

"Jewish institutions have been attacked with bombs, 'Molotov cocktails', and machine guns. There have been a number of hoodlum incidents, such as the bombing of Jewish hospitals. Unfortunately, the police investigations have not been such as to reassure the Jewish community."

Turning to Algeria, Mr. Berlack said that "uncertain security" under a Moslem regime had caused all but some 10,000 Jews out of 115,000 to emigrate. The in-

U.S. Ex-Minister To Bolivia, Siam, Was Highly Honored

David E. Kaufman, lawyer and former United States Minister to Bolivia and Siam, now Thailand, died recently in the University of Pennsylvania Hospital. He was 78 years old and lived in the Ritten-house Plaza apartments. Mr. Kaufman, the son of an immigrant peddler from Lithuania, had to work to pay for his education. He became a successful lawyer in his hometown of Towanda, says the New York Times, and joined a Philadelphia firm as an expert in international law and then was drafted into the diplomatic service.

He was graduated from Susquehanna Collegiate Institute in Towanda and, in 1904, from the Dickinson Law School at Carlisle. Later he studied international law and became a member of the law firm of Mowitz, Kaufman, & Kohlas in Philadelphia.

In 1928 President Coolidge named him Minister to Bolivia and he often boasted that he had held the "highest" position the American Government could bestow. "Anyone who doesn't believe it is the highest office should look at the map," he would say. 'La Paz, Bolivia, is 12,500 feet above sea level."

Before illness forced him to resign at the end of the Coolidge Administration, Mr. Kaufman was credited with being largely responsible for improved diplomatic re-

Labor Zionist Order Raised $7 Million; To Mark 50th Year

A call to intensify their work on behalf of Israel and to strengthen Jewish education in the United States was made by Meyer L. Brown, president, to one hundred representatives of the national board of directors of Farband-Labor Zionist Order, the national Jewish fraternal organization, when it met in New York to inaugurate a year-long observance of its fiftieth anniversary in 1963 in the United States and Canada. Mr. Brown reported that in the past year the members of branches of Farband raised more than $7,000,000 for Israeli purposes, and for cultural, educational, and communal work in the United States and Canada.

"American Jewry," he said, "has done magnificent work for Israel but it has it within its capacity to do even more, particularly in these times when large communities of new immigrants are entering that country and greater opportunities than ever before exist for its economic and cultural development. Here in the United States the Jewish community has made great strides in the fields of Jewish education, youth service, social welfare services, and cultural religious activities. But we are still faced with the problem of providing the younger generation with a more adequate Jewish education than it is now receiving, and only the merest beginnings have been made in adult Jewish education."

Describing Farband as an organization that in the fifty years of its existence "has always been a vanguard force in helping to bring about the establishment of the Jewish State and its upbuilding, and supporting Jewish communities and in enhancing the cultural and spiritual content of American Jewish life," Mr. Brown urged the Farband membership to continue "to be an example to the rest of the American Jewish community."

The golden jubilee year of Farband will culminate at a national convention in New York next December. Louis Segal, Farband general secretary, in his annual report, said that Farband now numbers close to 40,000 members, organized in 320 branches in 120 communities in the United States and Canada. As a fraternal benefit society it has more than $18,000,000 insurance in force. It has enrolled more than 4,000 newcomers from European countries in recent years, who have received assistance in various forms to help them become integrated in America. Mr. Segal described as one of the most unique examples of Farband assistance to newcomers its two flourishing branches of Cuban refugees, both organized in 1962.

One branch in New York has close to 200 members and conducts a vigorous cultural program which attracts hundreds of Cuban Jewish refugees who are not members. Farband has helped this branch to organize a Jewish afternoon school in Brooklyn for the children of its members, and it now has an enrollment of 60 pupils. The other branch, in Miami, is named for David Bliss, the outstanding leader of Cuban Jewry before the Castro regime.

Mr. Segal reported that the Farband had made repeated representations to the United States Government and to the Ambassadors of Argentina, Uruguay, and other Latin American countries in Washington, regarding the anti-Semitic violence that took place in those lands in 1962. He stated that Farband had received assurances by officials of those governments "that energetic measures would be taken by the [illegible] American Jewry, developments affecting the 3,000,000 Jews in the Soviet Union. It conducted a country-wide series of large public meetings commemorating the tenth anniversary of the execution of Yiddish writers and cultural leaders in Russia by the Stalin regime.

During the past year, Farband gave strong backing to federal aid to education, Medicare, and other measures for the benefit of America's senior citizens and the liberalization of U.S. immigration laws, particularly with respect to the victims of totaliterian oppression. He said the organization plans to be even more active in support of such measures for the public welfare during the jubilee year.

Mr. Segal said that an expected five hundred Farband leaders and members will make a fiftieth anniversary pilgrimage tour to Israel next summer to take part in ceremonies for the start of construction of three projects which the Histadrut, Israel's Labor Federation, is establishing to honor Farband's jubilee year. One of the projects will be a new hospital in the Negev for Kupat Holim, the Histadrut Health Service; the second will be a research facility in Bet Berl, the Workers' College near Kfar Saba; and the third will be a center for retired workers of Histadrut at Efal, the Farband colony near Tel Aviv.

Entirely New English Translation Of First Five Books Of Moses Corrects All Previous Ones

Publication of an entirely new translation of the Torah, the first five books of the Bible, also known as the Books of Moses or the Pentateuch, was announced in Philadelphia, Pa., by the Jewish Publication Society of America. This publication marks completion of the first phase of a twenty-year project undertaken by a committee of the leading Jewish Bible scholars in the English-speaking world, to translate the entire Bible (Old Testament) directly into modern English from the ancient, traditional Hebrew text. The volume just published is the first such translation into English under the sponsorship of an authorized community body.

In announcing the publication, Sol Satinsky, Philadelphia industrialist who is president of the Society, declared: "This publication is the culmination of eight years of dedicated effort by an outstanding group, representing the highest achievements of Jewish Biblical scholarship in the English-speaking world. In fidelity to the actual meaning of the ancient Hebrew text of the Bible, preserved through centuries by the Masoretic scribes, this translation is the most accurate ever made into English, contemporary English which can be read with ease and fuller understanding by Americans to whom the traditional rhetoric of the King James translation is an obstacle.

"It is to be hoped that those few individuals who saw fit, prior to the publication of this historic new translation, to voice criticisms before they had seen the text, will now read it and see for themselves how faithfully this translation adheres to the letter, the meaning, and the spirit of the traditional Holy Scriptures."

Mr. Satinsky pointed out that the translators had been aided in their work by a vast growth of knowledge about Biblical times and languages which had come to light in recent years, pointing out that this new knowledge had made possible some major corrections. As examples, he cited a revision in the very opening phrases in the Book of Genesis, which now reads, "When God began to create the Heaven and the earth . . ." "The Committee made this change," he said, "as a more accurate rendering of the original Hebrew, which the King James translation of the seventeenth Century had given in the familiar but less precise version, 'In the beginning God created the Heaven and the earth.'"

Other revisions in the new translation, based on increased historical, archaeological, and linguistic knowledge, include hundreds of passages which have baffled readers and Bible scholars for centuries, such as the idea that Moses led the Israelites across the Red Sea. It has been known for [illegible] the Hebrew text could not be the Red Sea. Recent knowledge has led to its identification in this new translation as the Sea of Reeds, which was found, in Biblical times, in the area now crossed by the Suez Canal.

Another correction made possible by new knowledge is a revised translation of the Third Commandment. Previously translated as, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God, in vain . . ." which has been interpreted as a prohibition of profanity, it now reads, "You shall not swear falsely by the name of the Lord your God . . .", which is clearly concerned with perjury.

The new translation, Mr. Satinsky pointed out, has eliminated the archaic language of the seventeenth Century which has stood between most modern readers and a clear, easy understanding of the Biblical text, removing such archaisms as "thee" and "thou," the related verb forms such as "goest" and "bringeth," and the repeated use of words such as "perforce" and "even" where no corresponding Hebrew expression appears. He cited the aim stated by the chairman of the Committee of Translators, Dr. Harry M. Orlinsky, formerly of Canada. "Our constant goal has been to render the original Hebrew as accurately

Neila In The Synagogue Of Lyons

BY AIME PALLIERE

(Aimé Palliere, a Frenchman destined for the priesthood became a convert to Judaism. In the forward to his Unknown Sanctuary he says; "I believe that every conversion is an essentially personal act" and in this extract the reader is given the moment in time which changed the life of this man.)

When I was seventeen years of age a strange incident occurred which came to exercise an influence over my whole life. I was walking with a comrade on the Quai Tilsitt where the synagogue stands. We noticed that a number of shops had remained closed that day. My companion had heard that it was the great festival of the Jews and suggested to me that we enter the temple. I consented not without hesitation.

The synagogue was quite filled. All the votaries were standing and silent. I understood later that I had arrived at the moment of the prayer of Neila on Yom Kippur.

I will seek to analyse the impression that I felt in contemplating that which met my gaze. It was such that from that unique moment my life was to be shaped. This may seem inexplicable, and for me it is an unfathomable enigma, but all my plans for the future were to be upset and finally ended. I was to find myself unconsciously led in a direction which would have roused my indignant protestations, if at that moment it had been revealed to me. There was not within me reflection or reasoning of any kind, and for a long time nothing was to manifest the change which was to come into my life, and nevertheless everything dates from then.

Did I then feel on that memorable occasion an intense and decisive religious sensation? Not at all. That which revealed itself to me at that moment was not at all the Jewish religion. It was the Jewish people. The spectacle of that large number of men assembled, their shoulders covered by Talesim, (prayer shawls) suddenly disclosed to my eyes a far-off past. The Hebrews of the Doré Bible were there on their feet before me. But two details struck me particularly while I noticed all about me the faithful bent over their rituals.

At first on seeing the prayer-shawls uniformly worn by all the participants in the service, I thought that in a way they were all officiating. Several of them robed in white shrouds were scattered about here and there in the crowd, just like the priests who remained in the centre of the sanctuary. In the second place it seemed to me that this silent assembly was in expectancy of something about to happen. What are they waiting for? I asked my companion.

This double aspect which Judaism disclosed to me held nothing that could trouble the faith of a young Christian such as I then was. But here was revealed to me at least very clearly, so that I could understand what followed, two characteristic traits; the form of collective priesthood of which the Judaism of the dispersion consisted; and the spirit of expectancy and of faith in the future which stamps its entire cult with an unique seal.

In fact, in the synagogue service all Jews are equal, all are priests, all may participate in the holy functions, even officiate in the name of the entire community, when they have the required training. Later I was to understand how the aspirations of national resurrection complete and define in Israel this attitude of expectancy, so different from the conceptions of other religions, but from my first contact this spirit revealed itself to me in the silent "amida" of the closing of Yom Kippur.

In saying that it was not the Jewish religion, but the Jewish people which revealed itself to me at that moment, I set down a fact that was only clear to me personally. In truth, for the most part concerning the men who surrounded me and who to my eyes were so visibly of different descent from my own, the idea of their raison d'etre, of their historic rôle, of their powers of resistance and persistence was doubtless very vague, almost non-existent.

Nonetheless it emanated from the collective spirit of these Jews re-gathered. The breath of the race filled the precincts of the synagogue and my own soul was penetrated by it.

This was the revelation that came to me on that Thursday in October, in the synagogue of Lyons. And surely words are too inadequate to express anything so confused, so mysterious to me at that moment; and for some time I could not formulate that impression in my thoughts, still less interpret it to the outside world. But within me, like a germ implanted by the Neila, this revelation was to affirm itself and grow stronger and stronger.

Gift To Hebrew U. To Foster Israel-Arab Relations

The improvement of Israel-Arab relations through the translation into Hebrew and Arabic of important works of the respective cultures will be fostered by a gift to the School of Oriental Studies of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, it was announced by Philip G. Whitman, president of the American Friends of the Hebrew University. The $30,000 gift was made by Jesse Lowenthal, of New York; Milton Lowenthal, of Harrisburg, Pa.; and their sister, Mrs. Mabel L. Lewit, of South Orange, N. J., to establish this project in memory of their late father, Henry Lowenthal.

In announcing the grant, Mr. Whitman said that "the purpose of the project, namely, the improvement of Israel-Arab relations, is one that commends itself to every farsighted person who is concerned with increasing understanding among peoples and with establishing the foundations for peace in the world. This provides a dramatic demonstration of how the tools of scholarship can produce answers to some of the most vexing problems of our time."

Prof. Urial Heyd, director of the School of Oriental Studies, prepared the outline of the project. Among the works to be translated from Hebrew into Arabic are stories by the Hebrew national poet, Chaim Nachman Bialik; and an anthology of modern Hebrew thinkers, dealing with national, cultural, and social questions and edited with the help of Prof. Nathan Rotenstreich, of the Hebrew University. The books to be translated into Hebrew from Arabic include classics by Abu Hamid al-Ghazali, as well as an anthology of modern Egyptian thinkers.

New Jewish Center Dedicated In Sweden

The new Jewish Community Center of Goteberg, in Sweden, is "a symbol of the rebuilding of the Jewish community institutions of Europe which were destroyed during the Nazi years," Herbert Katzki, assistant director-general of the Joint Distribution Committee said at dedication ceremonies. Although Sweden was not occupied by the Nazis, approximately half of the 1,500 Jews now living in Goteborg are former Nazi victims who found refuge in that city. Altogether there are 18,000 Jews in Sweden today, about half of whom arrived in the post-war period.

Other speakers included M. R. Henriques, president of the Jewish Community of Goteborg; and Julius Huttner, chairman of the building committee. The Goteborg Jewish community provided most of the funds necessary for the construction of the new building. Additional grants were made by JDC and the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany, as part of their program to rebuild Jewish community life in Europe. The Claims Conference is the official recipient of German reparation funds outside of Israel. JDC receives its funds mainly from the United Jewish Appeal.

The Jewish Community Center in Goteborg is one of the many centers built with JDC-Claims Conference aid since 1955, when the first two centers were opened in Paris and Rome. Other centers have been opened in Athens, Brussels, Berlin, Lyons, Amsterdam, Helsinki, Barcelona, and other cities throughout Western Europe.

Israel Welcomes The Traveller — New Hotels, Festivals, Historic Sites, Are All Part Of The Tourist Scene

Israel looks southward and to her Mediterranean coast now, in an effort to spread her visitors out from the three main cities of Jerusalem, Haifa and Tel Aviv.

Tourists are being coaxed northward along the coast to the ancient harbor of Caesarea, where nineteen centuries ago the Roman procurators of Judea had their capitol, and where the Apostle Paul was kept prisoner for two years. Nowadays, Caesarea is the site of a splendid golf course.

To the south is the golden beach of Ashkelon. Polished columns of Egyptian granite and Greek marble lie scattered in evidence of its past importance to the Egyptians, the Philistines, the Greeks, the Romans and the Crusaders. Samson, according to the Tourist Office scholars, first set eyes on Delilah on the beach at Ashkelon.

Aside from the romance of the hinterland, there are some good economic reasons for the emphasis away from the three main cities. In 1961, 65 per cent of the hotel rooms in Israel were in those cities. Yet, the tourists spent 75 per cent of their nights there.

This was quite an improvement over 1955, when 79 per cent of the rooms were in those cities, and the tourists spent 95 per cent of their nights there. Still, in 1961 about 15,000 potential visitors were reported to have cancelled their plans for vacations in Israel, writes Lawrence Fellows, in the New York Times, because the rooms in Jerusalem, Haifa and Tel Aviv were fully booked.

If the visitors go southward, the season could be made longer. And the first big steps in this direction are being taken in Beersheba, the favorite dwelling place of the nomadic Hebrew Patriarchs: Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Even now, nomads do their marketing in Beersheba. They come out of the Negev desert that stretches from Beersheba over the entire southern half of the land.

There are dozens of places of striking beauty in the Negev, including the Nabatean and Byzantine fortress city of Avdat, within easy reach of Beersheba. Avdat was a lost city until an English traveler came upon its remains in 1871. It has been gracefully restored, and once again its columns and sturdy arches are raised high in the desert, recalling the lost epoch when it commanded the cross-roads of Petra and Gaza.

With big new hotels going up, Beersheba hopes to get her visitors to stay overnight, after they have seen their landscapes, and not head back to crowded Tel Aviv.

Local authorities are being encouraged to arrange their own smaller events and festivals to avoid the stiffness that often accrues to such things when they are organized from above. But the Tourist Office still gives its advice on planning and timing.

With a longer tourist season, and with a better balance to the occupancy of the hotels in the country, the hope in Israel is to lower the off-season rates and thereby build up popular tourism.

Israel is not an inexpensive country and, for travellers from here, it is remote and expensive to get to. As a result, the tourist who does not want to cheapen his travel by roughing it tends to look upon Israel as a place for either the well-to-do or for robust youngsters with sleeping bags.

A new, solely tourist-class ship, the Moledet, is geared to bring the moderate-spenders over from Mediterranean ports.

The growing importance of Israel as a Mediterranean tourist-mecca has greatly benefited El Al, which devotes a substantial part of its promotional efforts toward this development, according to Haim Sanderson, manager for the Americas, of El Al Israel Airlines.

Weekly frequency on the Atlantic rose to 10 flights and it is planned to step it up to two flights a day by summer. But perhaps the most spectacular success was chalked up by the introduction of regular non-stop service between New York and Tel Aviv, the longest regularly scheduled commercial service now offered by an international airline. This service has proved so popular that it will be increased to two flights a week.

El Al Israel Airlines has established a solid record in this area and, as in previous years, has devoted considerable time, effort and expense to making the public travel conscious rather than merely aware of its own services.

Through the "Visit America" campaign, initiated by the new U.S. Travel Service, El Al brought to the United States one of the first organized groups of tourists from France, and the very first such group from Israel.

Taking into account the many points of historical interest, the biblical background — all combined with the exciting opportunity to witness the dramatic birth and growth of a new nation, all these attractions suggest a continuing and significant expansion of Israeli tourism.

Eastern Air Lines "Happy Holidays" Program is Something New!

Improvement of its reservations and flight information service to the public on a system-wide basis is foreseen by Eastern Air Lines with its pioneering program for consolidation of outlying facilities into seven metropolitan centers in the United States, and one each in Canada, Mexico, Bermuda and Puerto Rico.

Eastern again leads the air transport industry in establishing these consolidated offices to provide "specialist" personnel ready to give not only local but system-wide information about availability of space, current and anticipated flying conditions, estimated arrival and departure times, and to accept reservations for any flight, on an around-the-clock basis.

The consolidation of offices will provide to many communities which previously did not have them, the convenience of specialized handling for group bookings, "Happy Holidays" all-expense package tour vacations, commercial accounts, travel agencies and others.

Something new in the way of winter package vacations is being offered by Eastern Air Lines under its "Happy Holidays" program this year — a low-cost, all-expense flying golf tour to South Florida, according to John S. Anderson, director of Community Relations, Canada.

Six leading golf resorts are co-operating with Eastern to provide seven days and six nights at any one of these country club lodges for as little as $89 European Plan; or $99, Modified American Plan — breakfast and dinner included. Extra nights cost as little as $11.50 and $16.50 respectively. Among these are: The Diplomat Motel Inn, at Hollywood Beach; the Doral Hotel and Country Club, in Miami; and the Hollywood Beach Hotel, Golf and Tennis Club, in Hollywood Beach.

Combined with Eastern's new, low 15% round-trip eight to 22-day excursion fares now in effect for travel to Florida during the off-peak times between Monday noon and Friday noon, the "Fabulous Florida Golf Tour" offers northern golfing enthusiasts an opportunity to play some of the state's most famous 18-hole championship courses during the most popular months.

Included with the golfing package tours are free transportation to and from the nearest airport (with deductions from the package price in some instances where visitors arrive in rental cars); unlimited greens fees; use of swimming pools, cabanas, and other hotel or motel facilities; and participating in various social and night-life activities which the resorts arrange for their guests.

TRANS-CANADA AIR LINES
AIR CANADA

EUROPE EXPECTS YOU- ★ ★ TIME TO GET GOING!

WHEN A LADY TRAVELS

EXCERPTS FROM THE PAMPHLET PREPARED AND DISTRIBUTED BY TRANS-CANADA AIR LINES. REPRINTED BY PERMISSION

So you're off on a trip . . . and you're going by air! Even the sound of it is exciting. Naturally, you want to enjoy every moment of your venture — from the joyful anticipation of packing your travel wardrobe to the fun of telling your friends, later, about your adventures.

To make sure that they're the happiest possible adventures, here's wise, practical travel advice from TCA. Heed it and you'll soon find yourself travelling with all the savoir-faire of a diplomat's daughter — relaxed and revelling in the colour and excitement of life in faraway places.

If you're travelling alone . . . don't be shy! It's considered perfectly correct to talk to fellow plane passengers. Remember, other people are as eager as you are to find someone friendly to chat with. If you're a first-time traveller, by all means join a tour group to view nightclub life, for sightseeing jaunts, and to meet companionable travelmates. Best of all, relax and enjoy the spirit of camaraderie that springs up among travellers leaving everyday problems behind.

44 LBS. OF BAGGAGE— WHAT SHOULD YOU TAKE ALONG?

44 lbs. — that's the baggage weight you're allowed free of charge, on Economy Fare tickets. If you're travelling First Class, you're permitted 66 lbs. of luggage. In either case, you're sure to find yourself faced with difficult decisions on what to take and what to leave at home. That's the time to heed the advice of experienced travellers and travel light! It saves time, money and energy.

Start with a lightweight suitcase, if possible

However, be sure that it's strongly built, with reliable locks. A 26-inch or 28-inch pullman suitcase is best for women . . . fittings aren't necessary, but a sturdy, firmly attached identification tag is advisable! By all means have a high quality TCA Flight Bag for your personal articles. They're available through any Travel Agent or TCA ticket office at $1.75 for a regular Flight Bag, $3.75 for a Ladies' Flight Bag, if you're travelling Economy — free if you're travelling First Class.

CHOOSE A BASIC WARDROBE COLOR . . .

And stick to it. That way, one set of accessories (shoes, hat, costume jewellery, etc.) can serve with more than one outfit. Some clothes just naturally travel better than others. Lingerie and blouses that drip dry, shirtwaists with easy skirts that won't "sit out," crease-resisting knit and jersey fabrics, tweeds and small prints that won't show spots or smudges too quickly. And do try to include one jacket dress that can be worn for casual occasions with its jacket . . . do dress-up duty without.

THE WEATHER. EVERYBODY TALKS ABOUT IT . . .

And wherever you travel you'll find it just as unpredictable as it is at home! The natives will tell you it's a most unusual warm spell . . . or an almost unheard-of cold snap. But with a little forethought, you can take any vagaries of weather in your stride. Take along what seems to suit the climate ordinarily — plus a stole to protect you if it turns chilly . . . and a cool, silk dress that's sure to be right in any weather.

WHAT TO CARRY AS HAND LUGGAGE

Small personal articles that you carry with you — umbrella, purse, books, camera, binoculars or a coat carried over your arm — are considered to be hand luggage and will not be weighed. However, briefcases, parcels and overnight bags are weighed and count in your luggage allowance.

Good investment is a roomy handbag with a wide, firm bottom so you can find things in it easily — perhaps a shoulder strap bag that leaves your hands free on sightseeing trips. In it you can carry currency and travel papers, cosmetics, folded rain hat and collapsible string bag for shopping, and the dozens of other small items you'll want to have close at hand at all times.

One word of caution, though. Don't load yourself down with numerous, awkward and heavy pieces of hand luggage. Remember . . . you have to carry it.

WHAT TO WEAR WHILE YOU'RE GETTING THERE

Plan your "en route" costume as carefully as you plan the rest of your travel wardrobe. You're aiming for a happy combination of chic and comfort that will bring you to your destination looking your best. A good idea, then, is to choose a fabric that resists wrinkles and spots, a skirt style that won't "sit out" or prove uncomfortably narrow and short on a long journey.

Of course, your first consideration has to be climate. But comfortable, travel-worthy suits come in all weights and fabrics, from dacron to wool tweed.

Choose a go-anywhere style with your basic wardrobe color in mind and chances are you'll find it the most useful outfit in your travel wardrobe.

In selecting the girdle you'll wear while travelling, let your own good judgment be your guide. Remember, a brand new, or too-tight undergarment can become uncomfortable before you reach your destination. And do wear shoes you can slip off easily if you want to sleep more comfortably. (It's considered socially acceptable during plane travel, by no less an authority on etiquette than Amy Vanderbilt.)

YOUR TRAVEL AGENT MAKES IT ALL SO EASY

All his years of experience and knowledge of the world of travel are yours for the asking. Wherever you go . . . however you get there . . . let your Travel Agent smooth your path. He's an expert in arranging the complicated details of travel . . . figuring out routes and itineraries, making reservations and keeping you within your travel budget. Yet most of his services cost you nothing.

Travel agents sell on a commission basis, paid by the companies they are authorized to represent. And because they represent a wide variety of transportation, hotel and tour organizations in all price brackets, they can give you unprejudiced advice on how best to see what you want to see — and keep travel costs down. Remember . . . your Travel Agent often knows of special tours and sightseeing opportunities you might not otherwise hear of. Before you plan your trip, consult him for expert aid.

Here are the kind of things your Travel Agent will look after: timetables — travellers' cheques — air tickets — hotel reservations — tours — passports — advice on what-to-see — what-to-wear — where-to-go.

THE VITAL DOCUMENTS

Here's where your Travel Agent can be of special help. He'll be glad to tell you exactly what papers you need — and the quickest, easiest way to obtain them.

Passport:

All Canadian passports are issued in Ottawa. To apply for one, pick up the special forms for passport application from your Travel Agent or at any post office.

Visas:

To visit any country in Western Europe, or any TCA southern destination, you do not require a visa. For other destinations, inquire from your Travel Agent.

Smallpox Vaccination:

In order to re-enter Canada (and to enter some foreign lands) you must have a certificate of vaccination of recent date. Your own doctor can do the vaccination and will give you a signed certificate to carry with you.

No additional inoculation is necessary for travel in Europe or TCA Caribbean destinations but, again, if your travel plans include other countries, ask your doctor to advise you on inoculations you may require.

Driver's License:

Take your Provincial Driver's License with you. By recent agreement, many countries permit you to drive with it. An International Driving Permit is also useful, though not essential. If you are a member of an automobile club, inquire about such a permit — many auto clubs are authorized to issue them at a reasonable price.

TRY THE SCIENTIFIC APPROACH TO BAG-PACKING

Two basic rules to keep in mind: (1) place heavy and/or odd-shaped articles on the bottom of the suitcase, and (2) pack in neat layers that can be lifted out of suitcase as a unit, when you need something underneath.

Bottom Layer: Place shoes (in plastic bags, toe to heel) at one end. Place waterproof cosmetic bag at other end, leaving middle empty. At same end as cosmetic bag, place extra nylon underwear and stockings. Fill remaining space on bottom of suitcase with all other odd items and things not used regularly (jewellery case, extra handbag, packable hat, etc.) so that bottom of bag is covered evenly to level of shoes and cosmetic bag.

Middle Layer: a shelf made up of dresses and suits, with as few folds as possible. Skirts — fold so that they fill suitcase on all sides, with fold at hip so they lie hemhip in suitcase. Full skirts should be gathered into suitcase.

Dresses — fasten most buttons, leave belts on dresses, loosely fastened. Lift dress by shoulders and draw across length of suitcase until hem falls inside suitcase. Now fold dress back on itself with sleeves turned neatly underneath. Smooth lapels and shoulder pads. If skirt is straight or gored, fold it to fit complete suitcase area; if skirt is gathered, let it fall into natural folds.

Jackets — fasten most buttons. Lift by shoulders and lay face down across width of suitcase. Tuck collar down into suitcase gently. Pick up sleeves by back seams, letting them fold themselves and lay them across the back of the jacket. Then flip the bottom of the jacket over into the suitcase, folding at waist.

Top Layer: things you need most often: Gown, robe, slippers, cardigan, umbrella or raincoat and hat.

Now, does it look smooth and orderly? You can keep it looking that way easily and still have access to everything in your bag if you make it a practice to handle it this way: to remove or replace items on the ends of the bottom layer, pick up any bottom corner of the middle layer. To remove or replace items in the middle of the bottom layer, lift out the whole middle layer as a unit. With a little care, you can lift the middle layer out four or five times without repacking.

WHAT NOT TO TAKE ALONG

Travelling can be a joy . . . or a chore . . . depending on how complicated you make it. Don't make the mistake of many a first-time traveller abroad and take along too many clothes that you don't really need. It's all too easy to find yourself spending your precious holiday time dressing, changing costume, packing and unpacking, instead of out enjoying the sights!

Formal evening clothes: A very limited number, and then only if you're sure you'll have occasion to wear them.

Cosmetics: Small quantities in lightweight, unbreakable plastic containers. You'll find your favorite brands or others just as good wherever you go.

Cigarettes: Not too many or you may find yourself paying duty on them. Canadian and American brands are obtainable but expensive in many European countries and in some of the islands, so hang on to what you take along.

TIPPING . . . WHO, WHEN AND HOW MUCH?

At home you may be a lavish tipper — or a rugged individualist who refuses to tip at all. In either case, you dispense or withold largesse at your own discretion. Not so in Europe, though, and it's well to understand clearly just what is expected of you in the way of tipping, from the moment you arrive at the airport.

Porters: A good general rule to follow is 25¢ per bag carried, both here in Canada and wherever you travel.

Airplane personnel: No tipping please, at any time — it's a hard and fast rule that airline service is yours free.

Sightseeing tour guides: 25¢ for half a day; 50¢ for a full day.

Hotels and restaurants: Most add 10% to 15% (on total bills) for "service" which is simply a polite name for tipping. Check your bill to see if a service charge is indicated. Generally, if it is, you are not expected to tip. Otherwise, tipping is usually at the rate of 15%. However, customs differ from one country to another, as you'll see from the following.

EUROPE EXPECTS YOU—

Great Britain & Northern Ireland: Tip 10% to 15% at restaurants. At hotels divide 10% to 15% among those giving personal service. In all cases, bellboys, doormen and taximen are tipped extra. Tip only for extra service such as delivery of tickets, etc. Don't overtip. (Cab drivers should get about 6d (7 cents) for a fare of 2/6d (35 cents) plus 6d for each 1/6d of fare over 2/6d.)

France: Hotels add the service charge but you are expected to tip in addition everyone who does anything at all for you — bellboy, porter, chambermaid, waiter, movie usher, wine waiter, concierge, etc. Cab drivers should be tipped 20%.

Italy: Despite the service charge you'll find on your bill, you are expected to tip another 10% to everyone who serves you, as in France.

Germany: Restaurants add 10%, hotels 15% to bills. However it is usual to give a small extra tip when you pay your bill to either a bartender or your waiter.

Switzerland: 10% to 15% is the general rule. If a service charge is included in your bill, no additional tip is necessary unless you consider that the service has been exceptional.

Spain: Tip taxis 10%, leave small change in restaurants, in addition to the service charge on your bill. Movie and theatre ushers, doormen who get you taxis, boys who deliver messages, etc., expect a pesata.

Austria: 10% is added to your bill but an extra 10% is expected for any special service you require. If no service charge appears on the bill, 15% is the customary tip.

Ireland: Some hotels add service charge of 10% to 15%. In restaurants if the bill is under 10 shillings, tip 15%. A bellboy or doorman gets a shilling, taximen a shilling or 15% of the fare.

IF YOU'RE TRAVELLING WITH A BABY OR SMALL CHILD

Some wit summed it up—"there are two ways to travel . . . first class, or with children." You'll be surprised though, at how pleasant travel with children can be when you go by air. Youngsters are fascinated by the excitement of boarding, take-off and landing. And when watching the sky go by loses some of its interest, there are lots of other things to do. TCA has a variety of toys and picture books which your stewardess will provide to help keep the children amused during flight.

And to aid mothers travelling with babies, the stewardess has a wide range of accessories for infants in flight: prepared baby foods, bibs, safety pins, talcum, rubber pads, disposable diapers and nursing bottles.

Children between the ages of 2 and 12 pay half-fare; under 2 and not occupying a seat, 10% of the adult fare on international flights.

LET'S GO SHOPPING

You'll be tempted by bargains . . . or apparent bargains . . . everywhere you go. Sometimes it's difficult to resist spending too large a proportion of your shopping money early in your travels, before you've actually seen what else you may be offered in other countries. But before you spend any money on shopping, be sure you know exactly what the price is in Canadian dollars. It's easy to be misled by foreign currency values, unless you carry a comparative list with you in your purse when you set out on your shopping trip.

Your handbag should also contain: passport, travellers' cheques, some coin of the country and a scratchpad and pen, in case you want to make notes of prices or store names, or make a sketch for a shopkeeper.

WHAT SIZES DO YOU WEAR?

English and continental sizes are quite different from ours. When you're buying for yourself you can always try things on, but gifts to take home are a different matter.

THEIR MONEY . . . AND OURS. HOW TO MANAGE CURRENCY EXCHANGE

Travellers' Cheques. Carry most of your funds in travellers' cheques — preferably in $10.00 or $20.00 denominations. They are safe and cashable anywhere. In many places you can get a discount on purchases if you pay for them with travellers' cheques.

Cash. Before leaving Canada have a few Canadian dollars converted to the currency of the country you will first visit . . . handy to have in your purse when you arrive.

Also it's a good idea to carry a supply of American $1.00 bills with you for small purchases in countries where you have only short stop-overs between planes and don't want to change travellers' cheques into local currency.

Currency Declaration. Many countries require a declaration of currency. It means stating the amount of actual currency you have, including travellers' cheques.

Currency Conversion. Convert (only through responsible agencies) your travellers' cheques to local currency as you need the money. Otherwise you may find yourself leaving the country with more local money than you can convert without undue loss. Be especially careful to get rid of coins before leaving a country, as bills may be exchanged, but not coins.

ANYTHING TO DECLARE? CANADA CUSTOMS REGULATIONS

If you're planning to do any shopping in Europe, (and what woman isn't?) it's helpful to know exactly what you are permitted to bring back duty-free. If you are outside North American limits for fourteen or more days, you are allowed a personal exemption of $100.00 of duty-free merchandise. However, whether or not you expect to pay duty on it, you must declare everything you bought abroad and are bringing back with you or having sent. Save all your sales slips. They determine the value of your purchases and will help you to make a careful list for your Customs declaration. While it isn't usually necessary to show them, if there is any question of the value of an article, it helps to be able to produce the sales slip.

Your $100.00 personal exemption covers only things acquired for your personal or household use. Anything you acquire for resale, to use in business, or for someone else at their request, does not fall in this category and is therefore not duty-free.

Packages to follow: If you do a lot of shopping, or buy heavy or awkward items, it's often convenient to have them sent home to you instead of trying to bring them with you. Such items should be included in your Customs declaration, along with articles you bring back in your luggage. So long as such items appear on your Customs declaration you will receive them duty-free. Otherwise you'll be charged duty when they enter the country.

Gifts Mailed Home: Gifts of not more than $10.00 in value may be mailed home to friends without any duty to be paid. You need not include them on your Customs Declaration, they won't be deducted from your exemption. You may not mail more than one a day to any one person. Such gifts may not include alcohol, alcoholic perfume or tobacco products.

Limitations within your $100.00 exemption: You are permitted to bring back with you, duty-free, not more than 50 cigars, 200 cigarettes, 2 lbs. of tobacco and 40 ounces of alcoholic beverages. You may bring back more tobacco products by paying duty and taxes, but importation of alcoholic beverages in excess of 40 ounces is prohibited. Tobacco and alcohol products must be carried in your hand or checked baggage — not shipped home by other means.

And if you're taking such things as a camera, portable radio, etc. with you, be sure to have them registered at Canadian Customs before you go, so there'll be no difficulty when you return to Canada with them.

HOW TO GET ALONG IN A LANGUAGE YOU DON'T SPEAK

First of all, don't worry if you speak only English. Wherever you go you'll find it spoken in better hotels, shops, restaurants and banks. Even in small towns and villages it is commonplace to hear English.

Just because you can get along without speaking the language of the country, though, don't pass up the pleasure of learning at least a few phrases and using them. You'll find almost everyone you meet anxious to help you, flattered and friendly at your interest in their language.

Before you start your travels, buy yourself a small language booklet for each foreign-language country you plan to visit — and use them. In them you'll find the everyday phrases and words you need for ordinary conversation. Don't feel you have to memorize such words and phrases and keep the book out of sight. Use it openly . . . look up what you want to know and, if necessary, read it straight from the book. Before you know it, you'll find you've learned to say a number of things almost without effort. With a little practice you'll soon be enjoying your new fluency in a foreign tongue.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT LAUNDRY . . . DRY-CLEANING . . . MEDICAL CARE

The Small And Specialized Museums Of Europe Provide A Rare Treat For The Visitor

No art lover visits the European Continent without visiting the Louvre, the Prado and the Uffizi, but a number of comparatively unknown smaller museums are overlooked. Not far from the beaten paths, writes Richard McLanahan, in the New York Times, they repay the time and effort involved in seeking them out.

Among them are such specialized institutions as the Museum of the Horse in Saumur, France, the Police Museum in Paris (with its sinister display of the artifacts of crime), the Kon-Tiki Museum in Oslo, and the Columbus Library in the Cathedral of Seville, with charts and documents relating to the great explorer. Among scientific collections overlapping art, there are the Museum of Transport in Lucerne, the Leonardo da Vinci Museum in Milan and the Museum of Technology in Munich, with its reconstruction of the laboratory of Galileo. All of these have fewer visitors than they deserve.

But considering only the art museums, here are a few suggestions, ranging in scope of their collections from ancient to modern and in geography from the Baltic to the Mediterranean.

"Louisiana," thirty miles north of Copenhagen: A new museum of twentieth-century Danish art, probably the most attractive and architecturally distinctive of its kind on the Continent. The name is derived from the estate on which it is built, which once belonged to a nobleman who thus memorialized his three wives, all named Louise.

The original country house serves as an entrance pavilion and is connected by glazed corridors with exhibition pavilions lying among centuries-old trees. You leave the children in a special playroom and look at perceptively installed exhibitions, listen to music, browse in an inviting library and enjoy a snack or an aperitif on a sculpture terrace overlooking the sea.

Rubens' House, Antwerp: Rubens is not generally thought of as an architect, but a visit to his house, situated near the Oude Vaartplein, where an open-air market sells everything from puppies to blue jeans, shows that he was a master not only in architecture but in garden planning as well.

His design has been reconstructed with scholarly accuracy, the house is furnished largely with his possessions, and the atmosphere reflects his vigorous enthusiasms. The aristocratic but unostentatious life of one of the world's greatest painters is evoked.

Middelheim, on the outskirts of Antwerp: A handsomely landscaped park with a lake, an outdoor restaurant and one of the finest collections anywhere of modern sculpture. Henry Moore's famous "King and Queen" is among the monumental pieces, all displayed in an incomparable garden setting.

Musée Wiertz, Brussels: Opposite the Natural History Museum, this is a real curiosity. During the nineteenth century, Anton Joseph Wiertz, a strange though gifted artist, spent a lifetime covering vast canvases with wild fantasies full of violent motion and a sense of imminent doom. His house and studio are open to the public as the Musée Wiertz.

Considered mad by his contemporaries, he in some ways continues the tradition of Hieronymous Bosch, and his surrealistic style has found a new popularity in the atomic age. His works, once scorned, are beginning to be recognized for their undeniable, nightmarish power.

Palace of the Bishops, Angers: The French city near the Loir was once the capital of Anjou, and the Museum of Religious Art in the old Palace of the Bishops possesses, among other extraordinary things, a collection of tapestries from the fourteenth to the eighteenth century. Among these is the unique Apocalypse series woven about 1380, which is not only among the finest of its kind anywhere but proves that tapestries can be as genuinely expressive and powerful as the great fresco cycles.

Musée Rolin, Autun: Chancellor Nicolas Rolin was one of the leading figures in fifteenth century Burgundy, whose dukes outshone the kings of France. Near the Cathedral of St. Lazare in Autun the chancellor built this palace for his son Guillaume. The gem of the collection is the celebrated Nativity by the Master of Moulins.

Conques: This tiny medieval town hidden in the wooded hills of Auvergne in south-central France, nineteen miles north of Rodez, is one of the great sights in France, or in the world. From the eleventh to the thirteenth century it was an important waystop on the pilgrimage road to Santiago da Compostella in Spain.

It boasts a superb Romanesque church dedicated to Sainte Foy, with a tympanum in perfect preservation and a treasure of goldsmith work from the ninth to the eleventh century that is virtually unequalled in quality by those of the greatest cathedrals.

Recently beautifully installed by technicians from the Louvre, the collection is dominated by one of the great medieval works of its kind, "the Majesty of Conques," a reliquary statue of Sainte Foy, in gold and jewels, enthroned and holding tiny vials for the fresh flowers, which were placed there on her feast day.

Musée Basque, Bayonne: In the far southwest corner of France at the base of the Pyrénées, on the right bank of the Nive where it joins the Adour, this museum is a fascinating and complete exposition of the art and history of this mountain race.

Air France, The World's Largest Airline, Has Welcome Service Offices Through Its Network

The problem of what to do at a Paris airport between flights has been solved by Air France for passengers who may have such time on their hands.

Because Paris is at the crossroads of Europe, businessmen and tourists often arrange to stop over for a few days on their way to or from other cities. Sometimes, however, they only have a few spare hours to spend at either Orly or Le Bourget airports until the departure of a connecting flight. Formerly, all they could do was stay where they were. Now the French airline offers a choice of six short tours which feature some of the architectural and historic sights in the Paris area.

Additional information about the Minitours and other complementary services can be obtained at any of the 134 Air France Welcome Service counters around the world.

Begun in Tokyo as an experiment, the new Air France "Welcome Service" program met with such favorable traveller response that it has now been expanded over the network of the French national airline, the world's largest. In Paris alone, there are four such counters available. Already, 28 have been set up in North America, including the ones at Montreal International Airport, at Dorval, and at the Air France downtown ticket agency in Montreal as well as the airline's offices in Toronto and Vancouver.

Also ready to supply practically any type of non-aviation information likely to be asked by passengers are Welcome Service offices in Tel Aviv, Athens, Berlin, Beirut, Cayenne, Cologne, Frankfurt, Geneva, Hamburg, Hanover, Hong Kong, Istambul, Karachi, Lisbon, Munich, New Delhi, Strasbourg, Vienna, etc., as well as those throughout North America.

KLM's "Sun Sojourn To Israel" Is Just One Of Many

KLM's 17-day "Sun Sojourn to Israel" offers the traveller a glorious tour to the cradle of the world's great religions and civilizations. This sun-filled trip to Italy, Greece and Israel is actually an air-sea cruise, mixing swift, relaxing flights on KLM DC-8 Jets with a 6-day sea cruise through the beautiful Mediterranean. KLM's all-inclusive fare is surprisingly low. Flights are from either Montreal or New York.

Your KLM agent, or travel agent, will route the traveller through a variety of cities, to take care of the tourist's wish to see everything — or to assist the businessman with many places to see, in a limited time; and will arrange for car-rental at any airports it serves in Europe.

On KLM's intercontinental first-class flights, you get slippers, hot towels, sleeping masks, champagne, and other wines on the house.

KLM will serve Kosher food en route, or cater to a special diet. The passenger need only specify the request when seat bookings are made.

B.O.A.C. Jets Service Israel And Europe In Their World-Wide Chain

"A sunny and varied Mediterranean climate, neither as oppressive as the Tropics nor as capricious as Europe" that's B.O.A.C.'s description of the climate of Israel in its new edition of "Traveller's Digest", a guide to 101 countries of the world.

Spring, starting in April, is soon to bring new beauty to the countryside. In the hills the weather is pleasant all year round; in the low-lying regions, the farther south, the hotter and more enervating the climate becomes. The average temperature in Tel Aviv is 74 degrees F, rising to 89 degrees in August, falling to 64 degrees (lowest 46 degrees) in January.

Restaurants are one indication of the extraordinary diversity of social life in Israel. There are almost as many varieties as the Israelis, and of many countries of origin. Only luxury foodstuffs are imported.

Hotels at their best are of a comparable standard with Europe and America but they are in very short supply and bookings should be made well in advance. High season is from March 1 until October 31; low season from November 1 until February 28.

The main resorts in Israel are Eilat, on the shores of the Red Sea, the Mediterranean garden-city of Ashkelon and Tiberias.

You can get to Israel easily from Canada by B.O.A.C. jet from Toronto or Montreal, to London, then by jet to Tel Aviv in a total time of about 15 or 16 hours. The airport for Tel Aviv is 12 miles from the centre of the city and is called Lod (Lydda).

TCA Suggests Vienna As A Rewarding Stopover For The Israel-Bound Traveller

Trans-Canada Air Lines will fly you to Vienna on your way to Tel Aviv for a visit in this most charming of all European cities at no extra cost.

Trans-Canada Air Lines operates DC-8 jets from Montreal to Vienna, where connections can be made with, for example, Alitalia, for Tel Aviv, less than seven flying hours away.

Vienna's museums, archives and palaces, wide avenues and wonderful parks all tell of a cultural heritage founded on centuries of tradition, in vivid contrast to Tel Aviv, which is basically a new city, bursting with building and bustle.

During the summer months, Vienna is alive with open air symphony concerts, chamber and promenade concerts, opera in the Schonnbrunn Schlosstheater and operetta in the Redoutensaal (theatre) of Hofburg Palace.

Whether you just stop over for a couple of days or decide to spend a month in Vienna on the way to Israel, there's always something exciting to do, something new to see.

During the coming summer months, TCA will operate two weekly return flights between Montreal and Vienna, with connections to Tel Aviv.

The Proud S.S. France Celebrated Her First Birthday

The S. S. France, the French Line's proud superliner, offers the fastest sea-trip between New York and England — only four and one-half days to Southampton, just a week-end away!

The France, the first big liner to be equipped with four stabilizer fins to combat rolling, has total passenger accommodations for 2,000 persons, and carries a crew of over 1100. Over three city blocks long, the France has a year-'round glass-enclosed swimming pool.

For the last month, the France has been in drydock, and new paint has been applied; 30,000 square yards of wall-to-wall carpet have been dry cleaned; and the engines have been overhauled, preparing for the first birthday last week, of this flagship and superliner of the French Line.

During her first year, the S. S. France crossed the Atlantic forty-four times, carrying 65,000 passengers. There are eleven decks; and the fire proof France, somewhat smaller than the Normandie, is smaller than the Queen Mary and the Queen Elizabeth, but gives the impression of being just as spacious.

Eurailpass Is The Key To Enjoying Europe; Continental Trains Provide Speed, Service, And A Chance To Know Each Country

Train travel in England and on the European Continent, far from succumbing to the jet age, actually seems to be undergoing a renaissance. Unlike many of their American counterparts, European railroads are thriving and are looking forward to even more business this year, particularly from the tourist.

Each year, an increasing number of tourists discover the advantage of travel by train in Great Britain and other European countries. One powerful stimulus to tourist rail traffic has been the growing popularity of the car-carrying train. Another factor is the growing use of special rail coupons and passes, which make rail travel a relatively simple process.

Also important is the quality of European rail systems, which stress speed, comfort and service.

Many touring motorists have discovered the advantages of rail travel. They now can have their cars loaded onto specially built, double-deck railroad cars in one city, sleep aboard the same train that night and arrive at a distant goal the next morning, refreshed and ready for a motor tour of new countryside.

In addition to crack express trains, many European roads have added air-conditioned equipment, says the New York Times. Electrification along older routes has helped reduce travel time between cities.

Sales of special train coupon books and travel passes have been increasing yearly. For travel on the Continent, the Eurailpass affords an exceptional value for tourists who plan to cover long distances by train.

Available in North and South America through travel agents and at offices of the European railroads, the Eurailpass allows the purchaser unlimited rail travel in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland and Spain. Travelling by train gives the tourist extra time to learn about the countries, and the people.

Any sleeping accommodations and other services are extra. The Eurailpass also covers a number of European bus and ferry-boat services at no extra cost.

Nearly 13,000 Eurailpasses were sold in North and South America, in 1961, an increase of 20 per cent over 1960 figures. In Canada, a detailed brochure can be obtained by writing to the French National Railroads, 1500 Stanley Street, Montreal, 25.

Alitalia Features Special Tours For Businessmen; Air-Sea Tours To Israel

Alitalia Airlines has announced a unique, twelve day study tour of Europe designed especially for Canadian, American and Mexican architects, with visits to England, France and Italy.

In each country the architects will inspect not only historical landmarks but, too, many examples of European contemporary work. In each city, Alitalia has arranged for famous local architects and architectural editors to be guests of the group at lunches or dinners and to accompany the group during visits to the sites. There will also be opportunities to tour the various architects' offices. The tour leaves on March 9.

Direct entree into leading European fashion markets for a group of North American buyers was offered by Alitalia Airlines in a "Fashion Buyers Market Trip to Europe" covering three countries and five cities; and highlighted by the unique privilege, for the first time, of a group being permitted to attend the famous Pitti Palace showings in Florence.

As one of the principal international carriers serving these Israel, Alitalia Airlines enjoyed an encouraging increase in traffic and cargo this past year — as a result of substantial efforts in the promotion of tourist interest in Israel, according to Joseph A. Verini, general traffic and sales manager, for Alitalia, in North America.

An air-sea tour to Israel is one of the featured Sunny Holiday packages this winter by Alitalia. Alitalia, which established a special Israeli desk last year, is now convinced that the tourist potential of Israel fully warrants the use of specialized personnel. There is always increasing interest in Israel; and of course, Alitalia offers excellent connections from Rome to Tel Aviv.

the type of service obtainable depends greatly on the hotels you visit, but generally laundry presents no special problems. Usually two or three days should be allowed, but one-day service is often available. Costs are approximately the same as they would be at home. If you're planning to take along a travel iron or any other electric appliance, bear in mind that European and Caribbean electric current varies widely from one city to another, as do sockets and outlets in hotel rooms. Be sure to take along converters to adapt the current to your use.

Dry Cleaning. Foreign hotels have excellent valets who press clothes quickly and expertly. Dry cleaning, however, is another matter and it is wise to avoid it if possible. Most hotels send it out and harsh solvents in general use may damage fabrics. If you must have something dry cleaned, make sure that the kind of fabric and any special handling it may require is clearly understood by the dry cleaner.

Medical Care. Good foreign hotels have responsible doctors to care for guests who need treatment or advice. Many of them speak English. Canadian consulates and embassies, too, can recommend English-speaking doctors and dentists.

Most large cities have good drug stores with full assortments of drugs and sundries, probably many brands with which you are familiar. However, if you require a prescription medicine it's better to take along a supply to last your visit.

TAKE ALONG YOUR CAMERA

If you're fond of photography, this is the time to indulge yourself. Chances are you'll see a great deal that's new and exciting, within a very limited time. If you have pictures to spark your memory, you can enjoy it all again at your leisure — for years to come. HOW MANY CAMERAS? Most countries permit you to take in one still camera and one movie camera without duty . . . will allow more, if within reason.

How much film? The well-known makes you're used to are usually available in popular sizes, speeds and types in most large cities. However, since film takes very little baggage room it's a good idea to take a supply with you and, to avoid difficulty at Foreign Customs, break the seals and reseal it.

You can, of course, have your film processed abroad if you have the time; otherwise better wait until you get home.

Special equipment: At least one filter to cut haze and get cloud effects. A light meter unless your camera is of the very simplest sort, as the quality and intensity of light varies greatly at different altitudes, times of day, and from one country to another.

TRAVEL TIPS

Be sure cosmetic and nail polish containers are not full, to allow room for the expansion that can occur at high altitudes.

Take along plenty of facial tissues — small purse-size packets are handiest.

Make up a compact kit of face soap, laundry detergent, a good spot remover, a few clothes pins, needle and thread, small safety pins and a roll of scotch tape (handy for mending hems, removing lint from dark clothes).

Take along a small diary to keep a record of high spots of your trip.

Frequently you can save local taxes by having purchases delivered to you at the airport. Or, if you want to make side-trips, you can arrange to have packages held in storage for you at the airport till you return.

Carry your passport in your handbag always . . . don't leave it in your baggage.

If you don't own such things as a travel alarm clock, travel iron, etc., try to borrow rather than buy them if you need them only for one trip.

"When in Rome do as the Romans do" is still excellent advice for travellers — try to understand and respect local customs that may at first seem strange. Remember, you represent Canada — and in their country, you're the "foreigner"!

Israeli Workshop Is Now Privately-Owned Factory, Makes Money, Too

In the middle of the Mahane Israel village, about five minutes drive from Lydda airport, is the Rehat furniture factory. This village was one of the last of Israel's immigrant reception centers. In those days its was teeming with newcomers. Today its residents are chiefly former immigrants who were considered "hard core" cases but who are now earning their own way.

The factory buildings, quonset huts and wooden structures, are not much larger than most of the other buildings of the village. Only the smoking chimneys set them apart from the rest of the village and reveal the activity of a busy plant. Inside, one is quickly aware of the unusual nature of the plant. Over 50 per cent of the 118 employees are handicapped in one way or another. Some are amputees, some are chronically ill, others are former alcoholics, post T.B. patients, etc.

Everyone is at his job, busy at the cutting, grinding, sand-papering, and paint-spraying machines. Sixty-five disabled men and a disabled woman work here alongside their normally healthy fellow-workers. Not only do they produce on a comparable level with non-handicapped workers, but they also play a constructive role in all plant activities. Four out of the five members of the workers' council are handicapped.

The factory was established twelve years ago as a sheltered workshop by Malben, the Joint Distribution Committee welfare and rehabilitation program in Israel for handicapped immigrants, which is supported by United Jewish Appeal funds. At that time, 80 disabled persons were placed in the workshop for training in metal-work and wood-work, to teach them a trade and to help them become self-supporting.

In keeping with the JDC's policy of transferring its sheltered workshops to private owners, provided the handicapped workers remained under the new ownership, JDC sold the Mahane Israel workshop to two men who had previously worked for JDC-Malben. One was the director of the workshop and the other was a training officer. They have already paid Malben for the factory and materials.

Among the workers is 26-year-old Samuel P., who, despite an amputated right arm, does a full day's work in the spraying section of the plant. With his one hand he lacquers finished pieces of furniture with an automatic sprayer. Samuel, who lost his arm during a bomb attack in his native Tripoli in 1941, today earns almost 40 per cent more than when the plant was a non-profit enterprise run by JDC-Malben.

The same is true of the other handicapped workers. Their earnings have increased until they are now at the general level of factory workers in Israel.

Sun Life Sales Again Reach Record Heights; Dividend Scales Continue To Increase

Forward strides by Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada in 1962, included mutualization of the company and the sale of more than one billion dollars of life insurance for the fourth consecutive year, the president, Alistair M. Campbell, reported to Sun Life policyholders at the company's ninety-second annual meeting.

The Sun Life is now owned entirely by its policyholders as the mutualization plan, commenced in 1958, was successfully completed in December.

Sun Life's 1962 sales of $1,128,440,000 were larger than sales by any other Canadian life company, and brought total insurance in force in the company at year end to $10,840,722,000. Of this amount $4,265,659,000 is in Group life insurance, and the balance in individual contracts. Policy dividend scales will be increased in 1963, Mr. Campbell reported, and will result in an increase in these dividends for the fourteenth consecutive year.

Mr. Campbell spoke on general economic matters and said long term solutions should be found to Canada's financial and trade problems. He said the country's reputation in financial markets suffered from the events leading up to the exchange crisis last summer, but was gratified to observe the steady improvement in Canada's foreign exchange balances since then.

The life insurance industry in 1962 submitted a brief to the Royal Commission on Health Services, to which Mr. Campbell referred. In this brief the companies said that an adequate plan of health care must be made available to all Canadians, regardless of their age, the state of their health, their occupation or where they live. Toward this end the companies presented a plan of comprehensive health care, which Mr. Campbell said is an extension of the voluntary health insurance coverage now available to Canadians and already owned by half the population.

Under this plan, government funds would not be required except for people who cannot afford the premium and therefore the cost through taxes would be very much less than for any general comprehensive government health insurance scheme, he said.

"The insurance companies, experienced as they are in the field of health insurance, feel that their skills and their tradition of service to the public can make an effective contribution to an early and universal extension of health insurance in a form suited to Canadians."

Mr. Campbell said the views of the life insurance companies on fiscal and monetary policy together with a statement of objectives of economic policy had been presented during the year to the Royal Commission on Banking and Finance.

Mr. Campbell referred to the newly-formed $6 million, Canadian Enterprise Development Corporation, in which the Sun Life has an important financial interest, as a significant step. CED will provide venture capital and management assistance, not normally available from conventional sources, for promising young enterprises to develop new products, services and ideas.

For Some Strange Reason: Another, New Silence?

From The Workmen's Circle, National Jewish Fraternal and Cultural Organization, Sponsor of National Indignation Week as a Protest Against Soviet Anti-Semitism

"For some strange reason, the terrifying story of the persecution of the Jews under Communism has not penetrated the public consciousness of the free world," said U.S. Senator Thomas J. Dodd.

Basya Resnitzky, a Jewish woman living in Vilno, was arrested not long ago and charged with preparing to leave Russia for Israel. She did not deny the charge. "I wanted to leave," she told the authorities, "because I do not wish to live anymore in a country where people who make pogroms on Jews can be quite confident that they can do so with impunity, and where well-known murderers of Jews walk around free."

The sad fact is that, with Hitler's mass extermination camps still vivid in our memories, we are witnessing the steady rise of government inspired anti-Semitism in Russia. Synagogues have been burned. Jewish schools have been closed. Jewish leaders have been jailed. A Jewish community of 3,000,000 in Russia is being subjected to a widening campaign of restrictions and terror. Khrushchev clearly is planning his own "final solution to the Jewish problem."

Soviet anti-Semitism is not, of course, a new development. It dates back to the late 1930s when many Jewish schools, newspapers, and community organizations were shut down and thousands of Jewish community leaders were "liquidated." It has been charged that Stalin "shared Hitler's psychopathic hatred of the Jews."

The fact is that even during the war, when Russian Jews were fighting heroically against Hitler, tens of thousands of them were herded into Siberian concentration camps. Tens of thousands more were prevented from escaping the onrushing Nazi armies. Jews in the Warsaw ghetto were deliberately abandoned to the Nazis.

Following World War Two, an unofficial but violent anti-Semitism was encouraged in all lands under Soviet control. In one pogrom alone, at Kielce, Poland, 41 Jews were murdered by a mob in the presence of Communist militia. By 1948, as part of a campaign against "Western" influence, Stalin had closed down all of the Jewish schools and newspapers remaining in Russia.

No Jewish institution escaped his psychopathic rage. Even a Jewish anti-Fascist committee was dissolved and its leaders arrested. More than 450 Jewish writers, artists and intellectuals were executed. Still another anti-Semitic campaign was touched off in 1953 by the so-called "Moscow doctors' plot," a frame-up later denounced by Khrushchev as the work of Stalin's secret police chief, Lavrenti Beria.

Khrushchev began by denouncing Stalin's anti-Semitism. He is now emulating it. Perhaps this is the logic of totalitarianism. Russian anti-Semitic propaganda now equals in virulence anything published by the Nazis in the 1930s. A United Nations study has called attention to the fact that Russian newspapers and magazines, all government controlled, represent Jews as "sly, mean, slimy, unscrupulous, fraudulent liars, cheats, and thieves — traditional anti-Semitic stereotypes."

The New York Herald Tribune revealed a while back that Soviet Communists "had revived the anti-Semitic 'blood libel' of the Middle Ages in an effort to destroy the 11,000 mountain Jews in the Soviet Caucasus. The libel accuses Jews of killing Christian children and using their blood in the preparation of matzos for Passover." Significantly, Russia has now banned the baking of matzos, symbol of the Jews' escape from the tyranny of the Pharaohs.

Russian newspapers recently have been featuring stories about Jews arrested and sentenced to harsh prison terms, or executed, for "illegal marketing operations." On May 14, the New York Times asked editorially, "Why has such prominence been given to Jewish criminals in the Soviet press in recent months, though no corresponding prominence is given to the important role Soviet Jews play in their country's scientific, medical, literary, and legal life?"

The answer, as the Times suggests, is that the Jews have now been made the target of a major offensive aimed at wiping out their religion and culture and sharply restricting their opportunities in education and the professions.

Meanwhile, as the United Nations study has confirmed, anti-Semitism in the Soviet press has encouraged hooligan attacks on Jews. Beatings and murders go unpunished. A thick cloud of apprehension hangs over the entire Jewish community in Russia. The situation is agonizingly reminiscent of the one that existed in Hitler's Third Reich when the Storm Troopers were unloosed.

The big question, as always, is, "Why?"

A partial answer is supplied by the Russian newspapers. They have been attacking synagogues as "rendezvous points with agents who do underground work in Russia." Two recent anti-Semitic publications are called "The Reactionary Nature Of Judaism" and "The Class Character Of The Jewish Religion." The Soviet dictatorship has always been hostile to all religions and ethnic minorities. Apparently it is especially hostile to the Jews because of their age-old resistance to oppression and because of their family and emotional ties with Israel and the West. No doubt, the Jews are also convenient scapegoats for the Soviet Communists at a time of accumulating cold war tensions.

No one outside of the Kremlin can say how far the newest anti-Semitic campaign will be carried. Some believe that the objective is a kind of "cultural and religious genocide" — the wiping out of all vestiges of Jewishness. But the history of Soviet Communism teaches us that resistance to this kind of genocide will mean slave labor camps and firing squads. The Soviet press reveals that the firing squads are already at work.

The Great Untold Story of Niels Bohr and the Rescue of the Jews of Denmark

BY HAROLD FLENDER, NOVELIST AND TELEVISION WRITER, WHOSE BOOK, "RESCUE IN DENMARK", WILL BE PUBLISHED SOON

When the history of the Resistance movement in Denmark will be fully recorded, Niels Bohr's efforts with the Damocles' sword of death hanging over him, in giving refuge and helping with the liberation of many fellow victims, will form a notable chapter.

U.S. Supreme Court Justice
Felix Frankfurter

The death of the eminent Danish nuclear physicist, Niels Bohr, on November 18, 1962, was the occasion of world-wide eulogy. Perhaps the most heartfelt of the mourners was the entire Jewish community of his native land. For Bohr, whose name ranks with that of Albert Einstein among the greatest of modern scientists, was personally instrumental in the rescue of virtually the entire Jewish population of Denmark. So far as I know, this story has not been told before.

On September 30, 1943, the Jews of Denmark received word that the Germans were planning to raid their homes, arrest, and deport them to extermination camps. A previous ADL Bulletin article ("The Magnificent Danes," October 1961) has described how almost all the 8,000 Danish Jews were able to take refuge in the homes of Christian friends. A few weeks later they were safely transported to Sweden.

In this rescue operation, Niels Bohr played a key role.

It was October 1943. The Danish Jews were in hiding, but they could not remain so indefinitely. The Germans were hot on their trail. The Jews of Denmark had to escape the country within a matter of days.

The obvious haven would be neutral Sweden, just several miles across the sound. But would Sweden accept Jewish refugees?

Just a month before, in September, Sweden had had her fingers burned when she tried to intervene. Sweden had approached the German government with two proposals. The first, an offer to intern all Danish Jews, was ignored. The second, an appeal for permission to take in all the Danish Jewish children, was answered in no uncertain terms.

Berlin could not appreciate, State Secretary Steengracht told the Swedish Minister in Berlin, "why Sweden was unequivocably taking the side of Bolshevism, while our blood and the blood of our allies was being expended to keep the Communist danger from Europe and, thus also from the Nordic countries . . . If the occasion arose, this attitude would force us to answer in a manner not to be misunderstood."

This was obviously a thinly disguised threat to Sweden's prized neutrality. Would Sweden dare to offend Germany? Nothing in the past indicated such a willingness.

The tide of war had shifted toward the Allies, and there was still an outside chance that Sweden would brave Germany's displeasure. But time was running out faster for the Danish Jews than it was for the Germans. They had to be moved to Sweden within a few days, or not at all.

At this critical point, on October 1, one of the twentieth century's greatest geniuses, the Danish Nobel Prize winner, physicist Niels Bohr, arrived in Sweden.

He had been smuggled from Denmark to Sweden in a small boat. The Allies were anxious for Bohr's assistance in working on the atom bomb in the United States. Upon his arrival in Sweden, Bohr was greeted by Winston Churchill's personal consultant on scientific questions, Professor Frederick Lindemann.

Lindemann informed Bohr of the Allies' plans for him. Bohr was to leave immediately by plane for London, whence he would proceed to America. Much to Lindemann's amazement, Bohr refused. He would not leave Sweden, he stated, without seeing the Swedish Foreign Minister. An appointment was set up for the following morning and Bohr left directly for Stockholm.

Just before leaving Denmark, Bohr had been told by his friend Hans Hedtoft of German plans to round up the Danish Jews for probable extermination. Bohr's own mother was Jewish. Now, Bohr informed the Swedish Foreign Minister, he had no intention of leaving Swedish soil until he had a promise of refuge for all Danish Jews who could reach Swedish shores. The foreign minister proved uncooperative. Bohr went over his head; he demanded and received an audience with King Gustav.

The king assured the famous physicist that he was sympathetic to the plight of Danish Jewry, and would give Bohr's request his careful consideration. The next day Bohr received word from King Gustav that Sweden would accept the Jews of Denmark.

Allied agents in Stockholm were relieved. They assumed that Bohr would now be willing to leave for London at once. They were wrong. What good was King Gustav's assurance, argued Bohr, if all Danish Jews did not know of it?

The Allies were fearful lest Bohr might be killed or kidnapped by German agents in Stockholm if he delayed any longer. But Bohr was adamant. His demands were conveyed to King Gustav, and again Bohr triumphed. On royal instructions, the Swedish press carried the offer of refuge on the front page, and the government-owned Swedish radio beamed the message to Denmark.

Immediately after the broadcast Bohr left London in the bomb-bay of an unarmed RAF Mosquito. Because of a faulty oxygen mask, he was unconscious when he arrived in London. But his condition was not serious, and from London Niels Bohr went on to the United States and Los Alamos.

Niels Bohr's place in the intellectual history of the twentieth century has long been secure. With the revelation of the important role he played in the rescue of his fellow-countrymen of the Jewish faith, he has won a place among the lovers of all mankind.

This article is from ADL Bulletin of the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith.

Khrushchev's "final solution to the Jewish problem" may turn out to be no different from Hitler's. There was a terrible silence in the world when Hitler launched his extermination campaign against the German Jews. That silence must not again echo through the world now when Khrushchev threatens to follow his example.

flux of these Jews into France, he said, "is creating a highly charged, potentially anti-Semitic situation."

He said that, as the Algerian Jewish newcomers competed for available housing and jobs, "existing Fascist groups in France and the anti-Jewish elements among Algerian Europeans sparked open anti-Semitism."

Abba Eban, Israel's Minister of Education, said that small nations had to play "an active and assertive role" in the solution of major international problems. He declared: "They should behave more as agents of historic process and less as its passive objects."

Mr. Eban said that the world was moving away from domination "by two centers of exclusive power" toward a "pluralistic world" marked by a broad range of interests and ideas. The two centers of power he referred to are the United States and the Soviet Union, the New York Times says. Mr. Eban said that the small state could not make its influence felt "through military or economic power" but had to develop "an intense vitality of spirit."
